To be known as 'Tequila' the spirit must be distilled from the steamed hearts of the 'Blue' Agave, (A member of the lily family), & be bottled in or around the town of Tequila, Jalisco State. 'Mezcal' is widely made in Mexico, particularly in the state of Oaxaca, where villagers use their own local varieties of agave. Making mezcal, the agave hearts are roasted with local woods rather than steamed in ovens as for Tequila, imparting a powerful smoky flavour, before being left to ferment with wild yeasts then double distilled & immediately bottled. Good Mezcal, REAL Mezcal, is crystal clear & slightly syrupy... & at around 50% alcohol content, sip it AmiGos, don't shoot it!
